This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

EDITORS NOTE

The many warm friends in all parts of the Country to whom Commander Edward Hooker had endeared himself will be happy in having this result of his twenty-five years of earnest, painstaking labor at last available, and while he is not here to receive the thanks of his grateful kinsmen, nevertheless all descendants of Rev. Thomas Hooker surely unite in gratitude to him who gave time, money, and health so liberally in this permanent service to his family.

In preparing for the printer the work which blindness obliged him to leave incomplete, I have endeavored to follow his example of accuracy and honesty; in spite of this many errors and omissions may have unavoidably occurred and I shall be grateful to anyone who will call my attention to them, that they may be rectified in another edition.

The usual plan is followed in this Genealogy, of having the descendants numbered consecutively, the star (*) prefixed to the number indicating that the record of this person is carried forward another generation and will be found in the next generation under the same number, but in larger type and this time as head of a family.

A word regarding the Coat of Arms, the omission of which may cause comment,—Until the English ancestry of Thomas Hooker has been established, the Coat of Arms of the family cannot be given with authority. It may not be amiss, however, to give the one which has been most generally in use with different branches of the family—and which is also the arms of the Devonshire Hookers.

INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

Concerning Rev. Thomas Hooker.

Commander Edward Hooker, in compiling the Hooker Genealogy, hoped that before its completion researches would be made in England establishing beyond doubt Thomas Hooker's birthplace and parentage. It has seemed best not to delay the publication of the book until that indefinite time when this may be possible. The following introduction is prepared from Mr. Hooker's notes with the hope that it may prove an incentive to those interested to pursue the search and let the family have the benefit of their discoveries.

Cotton Mather, writing some fifty years after Mr. Hooker's death, says that Mr. Hooker was born at Marfield, England, and this is the sole authority for supposing that he was born there. The most exhaustive search of professional genealogists in England having utterly failed to find any corroborative evidence supporting Mr. Mather's assertion, the conclusion was reached many years ago, that Mr. Mather must have been mistaken, and now it appears that the family of Hooker of Marfield became extinct about the middle of the 17th century.

Many years ago Mr. H. G. Somerby, then official searcher in England for the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, was employed by members of the Hooker family to investigate the story that Rev. Thomas Hooker was born at Marfield, Parish of Tilton, Leicestershire. He met with no success among the records of Tilton Parish. Going to the city of Leicester, with the help of the clerks in the Record of Wills office, he failed to find any Hooker data in that vicinity, and reported that the story was very improbable, adding that if Mr. Hooker was born there, the family was only sojourning there as the name of Hooker was not found in that part of England.

After a long and careful searching of the records of the Archdeaconry Court of Leicestershire the British Record Society published an index of wills. From a careful examination of this publication we find that from 1400 to 1650, a period covering the whole of Rev. Thomas Hooker's life and several generations of his progenitors, only one Hooker will was recorded in the Archdeaconry Court of Leicestershire and during the same period administration was granted upon the estate of one Hooker, who proves to have been a non-resident. This seems very strongly suggestive that Leicestershire was not a residential home of Hooker, and is supports the assertion of Mr. Somerby, that the name was not found in that part of England. The one will was that of John Hooker of Waltham, containing nothing of interest to New England Hookers. The one administration granted was upon the estate of Thomas Hooker of Marfield, Parish of Tilton, gentleman, who died in 1634 and administration was granted to his son, John Hooker, apparently the only son—who inherited from his father, became John Hooker of Marfield, gentleman. The Manor of Marfield was for a very long time a Royal Domain and therefore never had a Manor House or Manorial dwelling upon it.

The estate of Thomas Hooker of Marfield was less than £6, thus showing plainly that he was a non-resident, having no residence in the Parish of Tilton. The son, John, resided at or near London where he died in 1655, his will made in 1654 having been proved and recorded in the London Court in 1655. In this will he names six cousins and one sister but makes no reference to any brother or brother's family. Among the cousins in the will he names John and Samuel Hooker, sons of Rev. Thomas Hooker, and thus this will shows positively that there was kinship between Rev. Thomas Hooker and John Hooker of Marfield.

John Hooker was not married so had no direct heir and the Marfield Estate went to the nearest of kin, his cousin, William Jennings, and all further connection of Hookers with the Manor of Marfield ceased.

Among the papers of the Harleian Society there are notices of Hookers in various places, most of them marriage licenses, but none of Hookers in Leicestershire, thus adding a slight corroboration to Mr. Somerby's assertion.

While the Marfield story is swept away no evidence has as yet been brought to light which gives any positive information as to the region from which Mr. Hooker came or the family to which he belonged, and in the absence of all positive information regarding this matter the only course to pursue is to collate such suggestive data as can be found and present it in as concise form as possible, and trust that at some future time some one may be able to trace the English branch of the family.

From a period antedating the reign of King Henry VIII, and to a long time after the "Restoration," there was in the South of England a noted family of Hookers. They were possessed of wealth, rank and social position, and they intermarried with England's proud old families. They were scholars, disputants, and authors whose books, written 300 years ago, are to-day found as valued books of reference in the larger libraries.

From these books we learn, that while they were loyal to their King and undoubtedly recognized the Divine authority of the kingly office, they gave careful thought to sociological matters and entertained what may be considered as at that time advanced sociological ideas,—as—that the people were the proper source of power, that society was constituted for the greatest good to the greatest number, that all men were equal before the law.

Here, then, we have a noted family of Hookers, possessing the same characteristics for which the Rev. Thomas Hooker was noted, entertaining the same sociological ideas which he entertained and to which he gave force in the Colony of Connecticut and around this family of Hookers we find towns, villages and parishes bearing names which are familiar to us as names of Connecticut towns, and here too are found families having names which we find in Mr. Hooker's company and among the founders of Connecticut.

In this family of Hookers we find the stock names were John, Thomas, Richard, Roger, Dorothy, Joanna, Mary,—the very names we find in Thomas Hooker's family.

There is little question that Rev. Thomas Hooker's father was named Thomas, and in that family of Hookers we find a Thomas born about the middle of the 16th Century and who was probably between 30 or 40 years of age when Rev. Thomas Hooker was born.

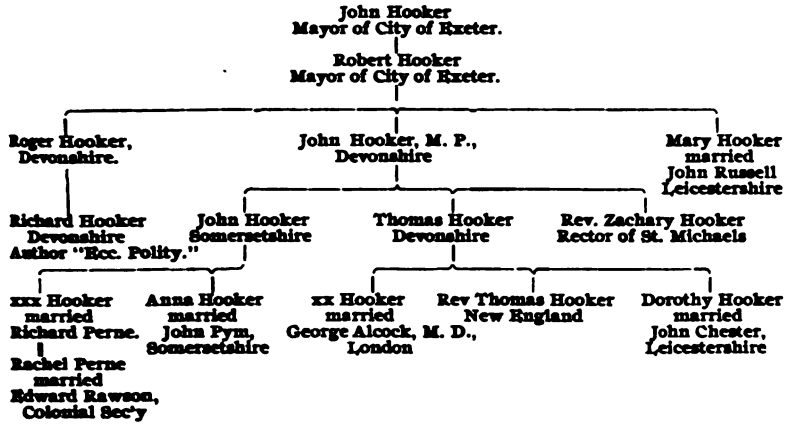
The Rawson family in seeking their pedigree find as one of their ancestors, John Hooker, a brother of the father of Rev. Thomas Hooker, and in this South of England family of Hookers we find a son John, brother of the Thomas above mentioned.

The intimate personal friendship between Thomas Hooker and John Pym can scarcely be questioned. They were of the same age, entertained the same views—and advocated the same theories and the same reforms, and many years ago the assertion was made that Ann Hooker, the wife of John Pym, was a sister of Rev. Thomas Hooker, and the assertion was also made that Rev. Thomas Hooker's wife was a sister of John Pym.

Ann Hooker, the wife of John Pym, however, was the daughter of John Hooker, and therefore could not be the sister of Rev. Thomas Hooker whose father was named Thomas, but she may have been a daughter of that John Hooker who was a brother of Rev. Thomas Hooker's father and thus have been own cousin to Rev. Thomas Hooker; but of that however, we have no positive information.

The seat of the Pym family was in the South of England and at not a great distance from the seat of this Hooker family, and though we have no evidence upon the matter, we may from the similarity of characteristics and community of sentiments very properly conclude that the two families were well known and intimately associated with each other, and there is a strong probability that Anna Hooker, the wife of John Pym, was from this Hooker family in the South of England.

So far as known, no evidence exists that positively assures us that Rev. Thomas Hooker belonged to that family of Hookers—but if he did not it is a most wonderful chapter of coincidences, which is presented in the following chart:



Some time after Mr. Hooker's death in 1647 the house in which he had lived at Hartford was demolished. In doing this work the laborers came upon a private receptacle which had been overlooked when the goods, etc., were removed from the house preparatory to its demolition. In this place they found a quantity of papers carefully bundled and preserved, apparently by Mr. Hooker himself. Without calling the attention of any one to the papers they had found, or having them in any way examined, these men threw the papers among the rubbish and carted them away to destruction. While nothing whatever is known of the contents of these carefully preserved papers, we may safely conclude that by their destruction the Colony and State of Connecticut lost much most valuable historical data relating to its early history. To the Hooker family the loss was irreparable, for there cannot be a doubt that among those carefully filed papers were letters from home, business correspondence and other valuable papers of that kind, even if there was not among them a complete family record, from which a reliable history of Mr. Hooker's parentage and early life could have been obtained. Those who had personal knowledge of Mr. Hooker's history had passed away and left but slight historical clues behind them, and this wanton destruction of these, no doubt, valuable papers destroyed the only remaining connecting link, and left open a wide field to be stocked with the ample product of vivid imaginations. A few suggestive notes are found, however, in some old records, and some have been found by careful search since then, yet they are little more than suggestions and can hardly be deemed clues, though some of them are positive refutations of stories circulated as history.

John Hooker, son of Rev. Samuel and grandson of Rev. Thomas, was Judge of the Superior Court of the Colony of Connecticut and the most eminent legal man of his day, constantly employed upon legal matters, adjustments, etc., etc., in all parts of the Colony. He was engaged also upon business matters of his father with persons in England, and although he was not born until a number of years after the death of his grandfather (Rev. Thomas Hooker) there cannot be any question of his knowledge of his grand-fathers' early history, and of the family connection in England.

Roger Hooker was the youngest child of Judge John Hooker, he studied under his father's tuition and accompanied his father on his various journeys about the colony upon official business. When he married he brought his wife to his father's house, and made his home with his parents, and when his parents became aged they relinquished the cares of house and family to the younger people and made their home with them until death called them away. From this life long association with his father, there can be little question Roger Hooker obtained a considerable knowledge of the history and family connections of his great grandfather Rev. Thomas Hooker.

In his family Bible Roger Hooker left a family record which he commences with a brief reference to Rev. Thomas Hooker, in which he asserts that Rev. Thomas was a cousin of Rev. Richard Hooker, author of "Of the Laws of Eccleciastical Polity," thus positively connecting the Rev. Thomas Hooker with the Devonshire family of Hookers.

Another old colonial family record refers to the family connection of Rev. Nathaniel Hooker, who died at Hartford West District, June 9, 1770, leaving a family record which he commenced with a slight sketch of his ancestor Rev. Thomas Hooker and refers to his Devonshire kinship in the same manner that Roger Hooker does.

Deacon Edward Hooker of Farmington, who died there in 1846, records in his dairy that, conversing with Right Reverend Abraham Jarvis, Bishop of Connecticut, Mr. Jarvis stated to him, that while in England where he had met the Bishop of London the Bishop of Exeter and other noted Clericals of the Established Church he had been shown evidences which positively established the relationship of Rev. Thomas Hooker of Connecticut to Rev. Richard Hooker, author of the books of Ecclesiastical Polity, thus showing unquestionably that Rev. Thomas Hooker belonged to the Devonshire family. Mr. Hooker also records in his diary similar statements made by Rev. Bela Hubbard, rector of one of the most important churches of Hartford, and father-in-law of Mr. Timothy Pitkin of Farmington. It is to be regretted that neither of these gentlemen stated where they saw these evidences or in what manner they asserted and established the relationship, and the matter therefore rests entirely upon the veracity, and the social standing of the Reverend gentlemen in question, and the diarist.

Within the past few years there has come to light a letter written by Deacon Edward Hooker (the diarist) and addressed to Rev. Henry W. Hooker,—Vermont, evidently in reply to genealogical inquiries. In this letter Mr. Hooker refers to the well assured fact of the kinship of Rev. Thomas Hooker and Rev. Richard Hooker, and that Rev. Thomas Hooker evidently belonged to the family of John Hooker, Esq., of Exeter, England. This John Hooker was a member of Parliament, an eminent historical and antiquarian writer, and Chancellor of the City of Exeter, Devonshire, England his father and his grandfather having both of them been Mayors of the City of Exeter. To the evidence here given might be added some circumstantial evidences which help to support the claim. Sir Walter Mildmay of Chelmsford (England) founder of Emmanuel College where Mr. Hooker was educated, and interested in the church at Chelmsford, where we find Mr. Hooker officiating as a lecturer, belonged to a family originally from Devonshire. These facts would suggest an especial interest in Mr. Hooker in calling him to the work at Chelmsford, and it seems to support the belief that he had come from a Devonshire family also.

An examination of the list of names of Mr. Hooker's company, and of the early settlers of Hartford and of the very old and prominent families of that city shows that they are largely the family names of Devonshire and that vicinity. It is also well known that Mr. Warham (a noted preacher of Exeter) and his company settlers of Windsor, Conn., were from Devonshire, and that suggests that this settlement of three towns on the banks of the Connecticut River, was a veritable Devonshire settlement.

Rev. Thomas Hooker died in 1647 possessing a total estate of £1,136 15s of which £488 15s was household goods, books, etc. Comparing this with other estates of the time we find that he was one of the wealthy men of Connecticut Colony and indeed one of the wealthy men of New England, and the query presents itself whence came this wealth? We have no record which in any way tells us how he became possessed of so great an estate. Let us therefore look a little at his own history as known, and see what conclusion we can draw from that.

When Thomas Hooker left College he became Curate Assistant, Lecturer, Teacher, all of them minor clerical positions. We have no information as to the amount of stipend attached to such positions, but we know the value of the benefices of Rectors at that time, being £10 to £25 per year presumably one in a subordinate position would not accumulate wealth. Nor could he have accumulated it while a refugee in Holland. Arriving in New England he was in a land of little money. Soon after he arrived he settled at Newtowne and he owned his house there. When he removed to Hartford he sold his Newtowne property to Rev. Thomas

Shepard, who subsequently married his daughter. Of the terms of this sale we have no information, but it can hardly be supposed that it was sufficient to make him wealthy. The settlement in the wilderness at Hartford was undoubtedly to some extent a struggle for existence with all the colonists and Mr. Hooker could not in the eleven years of such life have acquired the wealth of which he was possessed. Thus we see that it is extremely improbable that Mr. Hooker could have himself acquired his wealth. It must have come by inheritance probably from his father, although we have no record establishing it as a fact.

Another fact which has some bearing on the family's wealth and position,—the marriage of Rev. Thomas Hooker's sisters, so far as we know anything of them, we know that they married gentlemen of wealth, rank and social position and this too at a time when the social lines were drawn very distinctly in England—gentlemen from distant places, thus suggesting at least that the family was widely known, thus viewing this fact and the conclusions they suggest may we not properly assume that Mather was right when he said that Thomas Hooker's parents were able to give him a liberal education.

The first that is really known of Mr. Hooker is as a student in Emmanuel College, Cambridge, where he was entered in 1603 probably just before Easter. In 1607-8 he received the degree of B. A. and entered upon the second course of the College. In 1611 he received the degree of M. A.

Having completed these courses and studies of the College he became a Regent, and entering the Divinity school he commenced the Theological Course, and after this there is very little record of him. It is evident that he left the College before 1615. The next we hear of him is about 1626, at Chelmsford, Essex, where he was a "lecturer," at the Chelmsford Church.

One story asserts that he was compelled to leave the College on account of his Puritanical sentiments. The absurdity of this is apparent when it is remembered that Emmanuel College was a Puritan foundation exhibiting in itself a strong Puritanic protest against the many Roman Catholic ideas and customs still retained in other colleges. Expulsion from Emmanuel College for Puritanism could only be paralleled by expulsion from Heaven for extraordinary purity and holiness.

After leaving the College nothing whatever is known of him until 1626 he was silenced by Arch-Bishop Laud, for nonconformity teachings, and this act of the Bishop suggests that Mr. Hooker must have been some time at Chelmsford during which time Bishop Laud's attention had been called to him, and evidence collected to support the act of silencing, and here also occurs another evidence supporting the suggestion of Mr. Hooker's having been some time at Chelmsford. When the orded silencing Mr. Hooker was issued, a petition and protest was drawn up and signed by fifty clergymen of the Established Church, asserting that they were well acquainted with Mr. Hooker and his teachings, that there was nothing in his character or teachings to warrant the severe punishment of silencing, and asking that the order be revoked.

The petition of these clergymen was fruitless and the order remained in force. It is said that during this enforced silence Mr. Hooker established and taught a private school in his own residence and that Mr. John Eliot, afterwards known as the Apostle to the Indians was Mr. Hooker's assistant in that school.

In view of the fact that Sir Walter Mildmay, founder of Emmanuel College, was very prominently connected with educational matters in England, and that he had a long time before established at Greater Baddow a fine school of Puritanic proclivities for fitting young men for college, it seems quite probable that this school experience of Mr. Hooker may have been in connection with Sir Walter's already established school. However evidence to establish this fact are wanting.

The Arch-Bishop still pursued Mr. Hooker and about 1630 had him arrested and put under bonds to appear before the Ecclesiastical Courts. Forfeiting these bonds Mr. Hooker fled to Holland where he was still kept under surveillance by the emmissaries of Arch-Bishop Laud. Mr. Hooker's acts and position are noted in the Puritan Records of the fugitives who fled from England to Holland.

After about three years' absence Mr. Hooker returned to England but his return was at once made known to Arch-Bishop Laud, who sent out his emmissaries and endeavored to arrest him, but Mr. Hooker avoided arrest, and with his family and some friends embarked privately upon the ship Griffin and sailed for New England. From this point Mr. Hooker's history is a part of the history of New England. Of his bearing on the future history of New England I cannot do better than quote extensively from a paper written by one of Thomas Hooker's descendants, Walter Seth Logan, which was read before and subsequently printed by the New York Society of the Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.

"In 1633 he came to America. He brought with him the memory of the wrongs he had received from English Kings and he brought also the inspiration that he had received from the Sons of Liberty in Holland. He came here to do his part in founding a community in which persecution for thought's sake should never be a cornerstone, and where men might carve out their futures for themselves.

"It was 1633, Thomas Hooker was settled as the pastor of the church at Newtowne, Massachusetts. The church was composed of men who had been his followers in England, who had crossed the ocean, established themselves at Newtowne, formed a church organizaton and called him to be their preacher and leader there, while he was in exile in Holland. They were men who were in full accord with his political as well as with his religious ideas. They were men who had left their homes in the Old World to seek for liberty under a leader they loved, in the New World.

"As I have studied the character of Thomas Hooker, more and more I have come to see him as a statesman, rather than as a preacher. It was his to champion the cause of liberty, rather than to preach the creeds of theology. It was his to found democracies rather than to establish churches. At Newtowne he had as devoted a congregation as ever listened to the preaching of a preacher, for it was a congregation of men and women who had left all to follow him and his principles.

"But Massachusetts was a theocracy and consequently an aristocracy, and Thomas Hooker was a Democrat. In Massachusetts it was the church that ruled, almost as the church ruled at Rome, only it was another church and there was no Pope. No man could vote unless he was a church member. Out of more than three thousand inhabitants, two thirds of them men of mature age, there were only three hundred qualified electors. The church was dominant in the State, and the dominancy of the church is always despotism.

"Hooker was not at all in accord with the theocratic idea. It has been said that he removed his congregation to Connecticut because he and they differed with the majority of the inhabitants of Massachusetts upon religious questions. It is a mistake. He moved from Massachusetts to Connecticut for the same reason that he had moved from England to Holland and from Holland to America, to find a place not so much where he could worship God as he chose as where he could be a free citizen, with the right and the power to work out his own destiny for himself and to found a real democracy for himself and for his devoted followers. He moved from the valley of the Charles to the valley of the Connecticut in order to escape from a government theocratic in its origin and inevitably aristocratic in its nature, to a place where a real democratic government could be established—where the people could rule. It was a political rather than a religious migration.

"The difference between the ideas of government entertained at this time in Massachusetts and the ideas of Hooker and his followers is well shown in a bit of correspondence between Governor Winthrop of Massachusetts and Thomas Hooker, two years after he arrived in Hartford.

"Winthrop's letter to Hooker has been preserved only in his own subsequent statement of what he had written. Winthrop says of the letter:

" 'I expostulated with Mr. Hooker about the unwarrantableness and unsafeness of referring matter of counsel or judicature to the body of the people, because the best part is always the least and of that best part the wiser part is always the lesser.'

"This is a clear and concise statement of the argument that has been made since the world began in favor of an aristocracy —a government by the few.

"Hooker replies in a letter which has been preserved in full. He says:

" 'I fully assent to those staple principles which you set down, to wit: That the people should choose some from among them—that they should refer matter of counsel to their counsellors, matter of judicature to their judges; only the question here grows—what rule the judge must have to judge by; secondly, who those counsellors must be.

" 'That in the matter which is referred to the judge, the sentence should lie in his breast or be left to his discretion according to which he should go, I am afraid it is a course which wants both safety and warrant.

"'I must confess I ever looked at it as a way which leads directly to tyranny and so to confusion and must plainly profess that if it was in my liberty, I should neither choose to live nor leave my posterity under such a government, * * *

"'It is also a truth that counsel should be sought from counsellors, but the question yet is who those should be. Reserving smaller matters which fall in occasionally in common course to a lower counsel, in matters of greater consequence which concern the common good, a general counsel chosen by all, I conceive under favor most suitable to rule and most safe for the relief of the whole.'

"The more stilted expressions of those times make the language a little quaint to our ears, but the lover of liberty to-day does not mind this quaintness. He sees in these few sentences of the Hartford preacher, written two and two-thirds centuries ago, the best expression that has ever been made of the two necessarily fundamental principles of a free government—government by law and universal suffrage.

"It was about this time that John Hampden in England was making his heroic stand—losing his liberty and risking his life on the question of the payment of the Ship Money. All that the foremost and most advanced of the English liberals was claiming at this time was that the people should not be required to pay taxes that they had not themselves levied. Thomas Hooker was taking infinitely broader ground. To his mind it was the right of the people not simply to levy the taxes that they were to pay, but to exercise for themselves without interference from any higher power whatsoever, all the functions of government, to make their own laws, choose their own magistrates to enforce them and to live entirely under a government which they themselves should organize and administer.

"The fundamental principles of a true democracy—a real government by the people—were promulgated first by the founder of Connecticut on the banks of the Connecticut river in the town of Hartford only two years after the axe had been laid at the foot of the first tree to redeem it from the wilderness.

"Well may we claim for Thomas Hooker the title—to my mind the noblest title ever borne by the son of woman—the First American Democrat.

"In this letter to Winthrop, the true reason for Hooker's removal from Massachusetts to Connecticut is set forth. He did not choose 'either to live or to leave his posterity' under such a government as then prevailed in Massachusetts.

"The removal occurred in 1636. It is not necessary for my purpose to dwell on the incidents of that journey through the wilderness. Thomas Hooker carried his gun in one hand and his Bible in the other. He preached on Sundays and fought Indians when there were any to fight, on weekdays. He travelled by day and stood his turn on guard by night. He was a born leader. He was leading a people whose faith in him was complete, to a land where he could found for them and for himself, the institutions of liberty which he had learned to love as he loved his Bible and his God.

"The Legislature of Connecticut—called then its General Court—met in Hartford in May, 1638, to frame a constitution which should be the basis of the government of the new commonwealth. Thomas Hooker preached the opening sermon May 31, 1638, one hundred and thirty-eight years and thirty-four days before the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The full text of that sermon has not been preserved. It is doubtful if it was ever written. If it was written the manuscript has been lost. But Henry Wolcott, Jr., a prominent citizen of Windsor, the town just north of Hartford, was present and took notes. These notes we have. If we had nothing else there is enough in this record made by his loving disciple, to establish the claim which we now make for Thomas Hooker, that he was the First American Democrat.

"The text was: Deuteronomy, 1:13: 'Take you wise men and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.'

"The subject was how to choose the magistrates for a commonwealth and to set the bounds of their authority—how to frame a constitution for the government of a free people. The first principle that Hooker lays down is:

" 'The choice of public magistrates belongs unto the people by God's own allowance.'

"It is the people who must rule.

"Hooker's second principle, enunciated in the sermon, is that: 'The privleges of election which belong to the people therefore must not be exercised according to their humors but according to the blessed will and law of God.'

"That is, the franchise is a trust. It belongs to the individual, not to be exercised for his own gain, but for the good of all.

"Hooker's third principle is:

" 'They who have power to appoint officers and magistrates, it is in their power also to set the bounds and limitations of the power and place unto which they call them.'

"For the first time in the world's history, the suggestion of a written constitution made by the people themselves to establish a government and to limit the power and authority of their officers and magistrates is here made. The suggestion found its fruition seven months later in 1639, in the Constitution adopted by the colony of Connecticut, and a hundred and fifty years later still, in the Constitution of the United States under which our government went into operation in 1789.

"Thomas Hooker was not only the first American Democrat but he was the father of the Constitution of the United States.

"Later on in his sermon he says:

" 'The foundation of authority is laid in the free consent of the people.'

"And he ends with the exhortation:

" 'As God has given us liberty let us take it.'

"This was a hundred years before Thomas Jefferson was born, and yet all the essential principles of the Declaration of Independence are found in this imperfectly reported sermon of this Hartford preacher, preaching in the wilderness on the banks of the Connecticut. It was a hundred and fifty years before the United States Constitution was adopted and yet we find its essential principles in this sermon of our hero.

"It is not known positively whose hand actually drew the Constitution which this General Court of Connecticut that listened to this sermon, adopted, but this much we do know, that it was either drawn or inspired by Thomas Hooker. He was the first man of Connecticut. The doctrines which he preached in this sermon had never been proclaimed before to mortal ears, and the Constitution which followed it was drawn in close conformity to the principles set forth in the sermon.

"It is the first Constitution ever adopted as the original basis of a government. It was the first time that men had ever come together asserting their right to form a government for themselves. The Constitution places the government entirely in the hands of the people. The chief magistrate is electd by the people. Legislation all proceeds from the representatives of the people. If for any reason the governor or the magistrate should fail to call an election for members of the legislative body, the people themselves may call it. The governor is to preside as moderator over every legislative meeting except in case it shall be called by the people directly through the neglect of the governor and the magistrates. In the latter case no governor or magistrate is to participate in their deliberations. Suffrage is to be practically universal. It depends in no respect upon church membership. Justice is to be administered in accordance with established law. There is no discretion vested in judge or magistrate as to whether the law shall be followed or enforced. The law is above and over everyone; above and over governor and magistrate and judge, as well as above and over the meanest citizen of the commonwealth. The town is made the unit of the government of the commonwealth. All matters of local concern are left in the hands of town officers. The general government is concerned only over matters of general interest and importance. The government of Connecticut was as much a federation of towns as the government of the United States was afterwards a federation of States. Here again the principles of the Constitution of the United States were foreshadowed.

"The name of 'king' is not mentioned in the instrument. The founders of Connecticut acknowledged some sort of shadowy allegiance to the British sovereign, but under their Constitution he had no part or share in their government. No right to rule the people was acknowledged in anyone except the people themselves. Connecticut was virtually made a republic as well as a democracy. They were willing that the English monarch should pose as a king, but he was never allowed to perform any kingly functions in the State which they founded.

"The Connecticut government was worked out entirely for themselves, without any help or assistance from anyone else, by the citizens of Connecticut on the ground and under the leadership of Thomas Hooker.

"There had been other democracies, but the usual result was an exchange of the despotism of a king for the despotism of a majority. In Connecticut it was the majority that ruled; but it was local majorities that ruled in local matters and general majorities that ruled in general matters. The power of the majority to be despotic and oppressive was reduced to a minimum.

"Hooker was a man of sublime courage. In those days it often took more real valor to dare to speak the truth than to bare one's breast to the sword of the enemy. Cotton Mather quotes the saying of one who had admired the bravery with which Hooker had stood up against persecution and bigotry in England:

" 'I observed the heroic spirit and courage with which this great man fulfilled his ministry. He was a person who while doing his master's work would put a king in his pocket.'

"In organizing the government of Connecticut on the basis of a strict democracy—a simple government of the people—without acknowledging the right of king or government across the water to interfere with the will of the people here, he was in fact 'putting a king in his pocket.' * * * *

"I have called Thomas Hooker the first American Democrat. Thomas Jefferson is entitled to be called the second, and the author of the Emancipation Proclamation comes third—in point of time only.

"I would by no means detract one iota from the glory of Jefferson. As a proud Connecticut man and a descendant of the great Thomas Hooker, I bring my loving tribute and gladly lay it at the feet of his no less great successor, Thomas Jefferson. The Declaration of Independence has the advantage of having come down to us intact in the language of its author. All that we have of the sermon of Thomas Hooker has been gleaned from the imperfect record of his loyal follower who heard it. All honor to the Declaration of Independence and its great author, but equal honors I demand for the man who, more than a century and a quarter before, had preached the same doctrines from his pulpit in Hartford and engrafted them in the Constitution of the State he founded."

It being my full will that what trust I haue committed to my wife, either in matter of estate, or such manuscripts as shall bee judged fitt to bee printed, in case shee liue not to order the same herselfe, bee wholly trasmitted and passed ouer from her to them, for the ends before specified. And for mortality sake, I doe put power into the hands of the forementioned beloued freinds, to constitute and appoint such other faithfull men as they shall judge meete, (in case they bee deprived of life or liberty to attend the same, in theire owne persons,) to manage, dispose and per-forme the estate and trust committed to them, in as full manner as I haue committed it to them for the same end.

FIRST GENERATION

THE HOOKER GENEALOGY

FIRST GENERATION

1 Rev. Thomas Hooker, son of Thomas Hooker, born in England, about 1586, he entered Emanuel College, Cambridge in 1604. He received the degree of B. A. in 1608, the degree of M. A. in 1611, and entering upon a divinity course, he was elected a Fellow of the College. He left the College before completing the first course and receiving the degree of B. D. There are many reasons for supposing that he went from the college direct to Chelmsford and remained there until being silenced, arrested and placed under bonds to appear before the Ecclesiastical Court; he fled to Holland. Came to New England on ship "Griffin" 1633.

The name of his first wife is unknown and nothing of the parentage of his second wife, whose name was Susanna ———.

His second wife survived him, and though nothing is positively known about her, there are many reasons for believing that in later years she became the wife of Elder William Goodwin and died at Farmington, Conn. He died at Hartford, Conn., July 7, 1647, age 61. (See Introduction.)

SECOND GENERATION

SECOND GENERATION

2 Joanna Hooker (Thomas), daughter of Rev. Thomas Hooker, of Hartford, Conn.; m. (early in 1640), Rev. Thomas Shepard, of Newtowne, Mass. (his second wife). He was a son of William Shepard, of Tonaster, Eng., b. Nov. 5, 1605. He succeeded Mr. Hooker as preacher at Newtowne, when Mr. Hooker and his church removed to Hartford.

Mr. Shepard came to New England with his first wife, Margaret Fowteville and one son on the ship Defence arriving at Boston Oct. 3, 1635. He settled at Newtowne and became the third minister of that town. He succeeded Mr. Hooker and he and his church purchased from Mr. Hooker and his church all the property which they left behind when they removed to Hartford.

His first wife died Feb. 1, 1636, leaving one son. He married Joanna Hooker, and after her death at Newtowne, April 28, 1646, he married Sept. 8, 1647, Margaret Borodale, and had one son. She survived him and after his death married Rev. Jonathan Mitchell. He died at Newtowne, Mass. (Cambridge), Aug. 25, 1649.

3 Mary Hooker (Thomas), daughter of Rev. Thomas Hooker of Hartford, Conn., married in 1644, Rev. Roger Newton, who was a student of Theology with her father, son of Samuel Newton. He was the first minister at Farmington, Conn., where he was installed on the day that the church was formed, Oct., 1652, he having preached there some time before. He remained there five years when he was dismissed and prepared to return to England. It has always been supposed that he did go to England and after remaining some time he returned to New England and settled in Milford, Conn. Later researches however, have led the searchers to believe that after he had prepared to go the ship left without him, and that he remained in New England until he was called to Milford. He was installed at Milford, Conn., Aug. 22, 1660, and remained over the church until his death.

He died at Milford, Conn., June 7, 1683. She died at Milford Conn., Feb. 4, 1675.

4 John Hooker (Thomas), son of Rev. Thomas Hooker and Susannah Hooker, of Hartford, Colony of Conn. He was the first son of Rev. Thomas Hooker, and undoubtedly the first son of the second marriage. He was probably born in or about 1626 but no record of his birth has ever been found. Most probably he was born at Chelmsford, Essex, England, where his father was at that time lecturer, and where he probably married his second wife Susannah. John Hooker came with his father to New England, but there is little known of his early life in the New England Colony. He was instructed and fitted for college by his father, very probably assisted by Rev. Mr. Stone, and he returned to England to finish his education by a collegiate course when his father died and it is from his father's will, made but a few hours before his death, that the most that is known of the son John is learned. The will expressly intimates that John was not at that time of age, yet it also intimates that the question of marrying had been presented to his father, which would seem to suggest that he could not have been much under age. The will makes his receipt of a part of the estate contingent upon his pursuing his studies to completion and entering the ministry, which is strongly suggestive that a proposition that he should relinquish his studies and his proposed entry into the minstry had been presented to his father. The will while making no objection to his seeking a wife in England, expressly forbids him to "Marry and Tarry" there, which also suggests that this plan of life had been presented to his father, and from these suggestive items of the will, we can weave a very plausible and a very probable story, yet there is no positive evidence than this will to prove it.

It would seem most probable that Rev. Thomas Hooker should desire his son to pursue his studies at Emanuel College Cambridge, the especial home of Puritanism, where he himself had been educated, but there is no evidence in the will, nor elsewhere so far as known, to indicate this preference, and in due time John Hooker became a student at Oxford, a strong Established Church precinct, and emphatically opposed to the liberalism of Cambridge.

John Hooker completed his studies and entered the ministry, taking orders in the Established Church of England, thus obeying the letter but not the spirit of his father's will, and in like manner he avoided the injunction of his father forbidding him to marry and tarry in England, by not marrying, though he tarried there.

John Hooker became a curate at Mazeworth, Bucks, and tradition says that he became very dissipated, yet his genial good fellowship won for him a place in the hearts of the people and probably shielded him from any disciplinary action on the part of those above him.

When at last the aged vicar died there seems to have been a reluctance on the part of the patron of the Church to promote Mr. Hooker to the Vicarship. After some delay the Bishop collated John Hooker to the Vicarship, and here he remained until his death, apparently maintaining his reputation as a jovial, rollicking, sporting Parson. He died in 1684 and the record of his death, though very simple, seems to suggest a weird story of the end. He was found dead in his bed, and buried by his friends privately at midnight, and this private midnight burial seems to suggest a suicidal ending, and a secret burial to avoid the severe inflictions which the penal laws of England at that time prescribed for the bodies of suicides.

With the death of Mr. Hooker that branch of the family came to an end, and only the son, Samuel Hooker, minister at Farmington, Colony of Conn., remained to perpetuate the name.

6 Sarah Hooker (Thomas), a daughter of Rev. Thomas and Susannah Hooker of Hartford, Colony of Conn., born at Little Baddow (a suburb of Chelmsford, Essex, England), 1629 (or 1630); m. Rev. John Wilson, Jr., of Dorchester, Mass., son of Rev. John Wilson of the First Church of Boston, and Elizabeth (Mansfield) Wilson, his wife. They were not married when Rev. Thomas Hooker died in 1647, but preparations were then being made for it, and they were married soon afterward and settled in Dorchester, Mass., where Mr. Wilson was a colleague of Rev. Richard Mather.

Rev. John Wilson was born in London, England, Sept. 1621, and came with his father to New England in 1630. He graduated from Harvard College in 1642, and was ordained and settled with Mr. Mather at Dorchester. In 1651 he removed to Medfield, Mass., where he became a famous preacher, and remained there until his death in 1691. We have no record of the death of his wife.

He died at Medfield, Mass., Aug. 23, 1691. She died at Braintree, Mass., Aug. 20, 1725.

7 Samuel Hooker (Thomas), son of Rev. Thomas and Susannah Hooker, of Hartford, Colony of Conn., born 1633; married Sept. 22, 1658, Mary Willet, eldest daughter of Capt. Thomas and Mary (Brown) Willet of Plymouth, Mass., born Nov. 10, 1637, at Plymouth.

Rev. Samuel Hooker was aged 64, at the time of his death in 1697, from which it appears that he was born in 1633, but whether before the family left England, or after their arrival in New England is not known, though it is generally supposed that he was born at Newtowne (Cambridge), Mass. He entered Harvard College in 1651, and graduated in 1653. He entered the ministry in 1657, and preached at Plymouth, Mass., though probably not regularly settled there. He was invited to settle at Springfield, Mass., but declined the invitation and remained at Plymouth until he removed to Farmington, Conn., in 1661, where he succeeded his brother-in-law Rev. Roger Newton and became the second minister of the place and remained there until his death in 1697.

He was famous as an eloquent preacher and Mather in his "Magnolia" says of him, "Thus we have to this day among us our dead Hooker, yet living in his worthy son Samuel Hooker, an able, faithful, useful minister at Farmington, in the Colony of Connecticut."

Capt. Thomas Willet, whose daughter became the wife of Rev. Samuel Hooker, was at that time an energetic and thriving merchant at Plymouth. He succeeded Capt. Miles Standish in command of the famous military company of Plymouth, and he afterward became the first mayor of the city of New York.

The marriage of Rev. Samuel Hooker and Mary Willet was undoubtedly celebrated in a proper manner, for an account of it is handed down in the Willet family, concluding the ceremony with, "And Samuel and Mary did then brew a great bowl of punch."

They had eleven children, nine sons and two daughters, and from these sons come all Hookers who claim descent from Rev. Thomas Hooker. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Mary (Willet) Hooker, when 67 years old, married, Aug. 10, 1703, Rev. Thomas Buckingham of Saybrook, Conn. He died April 1, 1709, when she went to the home of her son-in-law Rev. Stephen Buckingham, the son of her late husband, and the husband of her own daughter, at Norwalk, Conn., where she remained until her death in 1712. Her grave is near the center of the old burying ground, near the present East Norwalk railway station.

Rev. Samuel Hooker occupied at Farmington, the parsonage which had been occupied by is predecessor, Rev. Roger Newton, on the East side of South Main Street and nearly opposite to the road going to the meadows across the stone bridge which now spans the Pequabuc river. This house stood a few feet northward from the site of the house so long occupied by Mr. Solomon Cowles, who was one of Mr. Hooker's descendants, and here Mr. Hooker died. He was succeeded at Farmington by Rev. Samuel Whitman whose grandfather was Mr. Hooker's cousin.

No stone marks Mr. Hooker's grave, but well attested tradition points out the place, as at the south side of the grave of Rev. Mr. Whitman, which is appropriately marked.

Mr. Whitman like Mr. Hooker, died while the minister of the town, and tradition says he was buried by the side of Mr. Hooker.

Of the characteristics and personal appearance of Rev. Samuel Hooker's wife, we have no positive record. There exists however some old data and memoranda, which enable us to form a seemingly fair conclusion. Her mother is described as a woman of great beauty and stateliness, one describing her as "possessed of beauty and majesty almost divine."

Mrs. Hooker's sister, Martha, was the first wife of Judge Saffin. After her death he married twice again, and he has left a record written after the marriage to his 3rd wife, that upon the anniversary of the death of his first wife, it was his custom to seclude himself and give way to his "inconsolable grief for the irreparable loss he had sustained in the death of his beloved Martha."

Mrs. Hooker had two daughters, the eldest, Mary, married Rev. James Pierpont of New Haven, and the Pierpont family still have her portrait, from which we form the opinion that she was a woman of uncommon beauty.

The other daughter married Rev. Stephen Buckingham, and settled at Norwalk, Conn., and the annals of Norwalk record that she was accounted the most accomplished lady that had ever come to Norwalk, while the traditions of the place still preserve the fame of the beauty and stately grace of "Dame Buckingham."

Rev. Samuel Hooker died at Farmington, Nov. 6, 1697, Mrs. Mary Willet (Hooker) Buckingham died at Norwalk, Conn., June 24, 1712.

The fame of "Dame Buckingham" is preserved in the annals of the old town, and the story of her stately grace is still remembered in the traditions of the place. Her husband and her mother are buried near each other in the old burying ground at East Norwalk, Conn., and it is probable that her grave is near these other two, but no stone marks the place.

30 John Hooker (Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), son of Rev. Samuel and Mary (Willet) Hooker of Farmington, Conn., born Feb. 20, 1664 or 1665; married Nov. 24, 1687, Abigail Standley, daughter of Capt. John and his second wife, Sarah (Fletcher) Standley, of Farmington, Conn., b. July 25, 1669, at Farmington. Hon. John Hooker, was one of the most noted men of his day. For many years he was the leading man of the town. He was the magistrate who did most of the business of the town and he was Judge of the Supreme Court of the Colony from 1724 to 1732. He was a member of the Lower House of the Assembly from 1699 to 1723. He then went into the Upper House. He served twenty-one sessions of which he was Clerk two sessions, and Speaker, six. He was chosen assistant in 1723, and rechosen annually for eleven years. He was on important committees and was frequently sent to settle difficulties in towns, churches, etc.; he was charged with important public trusts, etc., and the papers in file in the office of the Secretary of State, attest the carefulness, as well as the confidence, reposed in him.

When he married, his father purchased and gave him a site on the west side of the main street, some distance north of the Meeting House at Farmington, and here he built his house under the branches of a beautiful elm tree, where it soon became a center of generous hospitality, and a familiar gathering place for the sages of the town, who in the pleasant summer evenings seated under the leafy canopy of the Hooker Elm, discussed the passing events, while their long pipes gave forth clouds of fragrant incense, which curling upwards, dispensed itself among the leaves of the beautiful tree.

The "Hooker Elm" was a widely known feature of the pleasant street, famous through all the region round for its great beauty and the pleasant company which gathered under its canopy in the soft summer evenings.

In the course of events the estate passed on to Roger Hooker, a thorough gentleman of the old school, who prized the wide spreading "Hooker Elm," as his father had done, while he continued the far famed hospitality of the house, and greeting his friends under the beautiful tree, sped the time away with tale and jest, and merry quip. And again, another Roger, a polished gentleman, a Patriotic soldier, a delightful conversationalist, and a brilliant wit and a raconteur, did the honors of the house as his father and grand-father had done, and gathered his story loving, mirth appreciating friends beneath the famous "Hooker Elm."

Major Roger Hooker was the last Hooker occupant of the place and dying without issue in 1830, the hospitable mansion and its stately guardian, the "Hooker Elm," passed into other hands and eventually into the possession of Mr. William Gay. The old house was torn out, rebuilt and modernized until scarcely a feature of its Hooker character remained, and as if to obliterate all memories and lingering Hooker associations, because the beautiful tree interfered with making a straight path from the front door to the street, an axe was laid at the roots and the famous "Hooker Elm," like the generations that had gathered under its leafy canopy, was laid low in the dust. Peace to its ashes—and the last vestige of the Hooker dynasty, together with the far famed beauty of the place, passed away.

A chronicler of those days left this account of Mr. Hooker. "On Sunday the bell rang for a while for service and then commenced tolling. At the first stroke of the tolling Mr. Hooker issued from his house and proceeded to the Meeting House, and the minister in like manner started from his house, whichever arrived first at the Meeting House door awaited the arrival of the other; and together they entered the building, as they entered the door the bell stopped tolling, and all the congregation arose to their feet and remained standing while the two walked the aisle together. Mr. Hooker stopped at his pew door—the first pew—and waited until the minister ascended the pulpit stairs, then entering his pew, they both sat down at the same time and then the congregation seated itself. When the service was over, Mr. Hooker stepped outside his pew door, and this was a signal for the congregation to arise and remain standing, at the pew door Mr. Hooker remained until joined by the minister, when they walked down the aisle together to the door, where they took their stand, outside in good weather and inside in bad weather.

"When they were in place, this was a signal to the congregation, who until that time had remained standing in their pews. The pew doors were thrown open, and the people passed out, all bowing as they passed the minister and Mr. Hooker, many speaking and a few exchanging a hand shake. When the people were all out the minister and Mr. Hooker, bowing to each other, shook hands and then proceeded to their homes."

The chronicler also describes the ending of the Sunday rigidness. "The holiness of the day was supposed to end at sunset, but not a child in the town dared to stir, until the signal came from Mr. Hooker that the day was ended. When the sun had sunk below the horizon, Mr. Hooker, coming to his door with his pipe in his hand, walked down the path to the gate and leaning over it rested his arms upon the top. The moment his arms touched the gate, open flew the doors and out came the children with a wild rush and shout—Mr. Hooker was at his gate, Sunday was over. The shout was taken up and spread to the furtherest ends of the town with a rapidity that would almost put the telegram of the present day to the blush. Mr. Hooker with his pipe was at the gate and Sunday was ended."

Roger Hooker leaves this note of Mr. Hooker's appearance, "Mr. John Hooker had dark hair and dark eyes, and a dignity in his air and expression that procured profound respect." Another description of Mr. Hooker says: "He was a fine looking man, tall, very erect, and had a prominent large nose.

Capt. John Standley, the father of Mrs. Hooker, was a man of wealth and high social position, who had won distinction as a lieutenant and captain in the Indian wars.

Standley. The early settlers at Hartford spelled the name with a "d," and as they were educated men of high standing, etc., it may properly be supposed that they were correct in so spelling. The history of the Stanley family however assumes that they were wrong and the spelling a mistake, etc., and endeavors to trace the family to the family of Stanley of England. It has since come to light that Sir John Standley was an officer in Cromwell's army, that the family was then an old one and was not known to have any connection with the famous Stanley family. Probably this Standley family was the one from which the Connecticut settler came and their spelling of the name was correct. The name in America has now become irrevocably changed to Stanley.

Another daughter, Elizabeth Standley, married deacon John North, and was the grand-mother of Col. Jeremiah Wadsworth the famous Commissary General of the Revolutionary War. Col. Wadsworth married Mahitable Russell of Middletown, Conn., a descendant from Rev. Thomas Hooker, and thus while there was no cousinship between Col. Wadsworth and his wife there was a cousinship between each of them and the descendants from Hon. John Hooker and their children bore a double relationship to this branch of the Hooker family.

Col. Wadsworth, son of Daniel Wadsworth, founded the Wadsworth Atheneum at Hartford and presented it to the city, thus erecting a noble monument to the Wadsworth family, and one in which the Hookers of that branch have a kinship interest. John Hooker died at Farmington, Feb. 21, 1745 or 1746. His wife died at Farmington, Feb. 21, 1742 or 1743.

25, 1679, at Farmington, Conn.; married June 24, 1706, Sarah Standley, daughter of Deacon John and Esther (Newell) Standlev, of Waterbury, Conn., baptized at Waterbury, July 4, 1686.

He graduated from Harvard College, 1700. He was the first Farmington born man who received a college education. After his father's death he was invited to fill his place as minister, but declined. He studied medicine and was licensed to practice. He became the first Tutor of Yale College. He soon resigned his tutorship in favor of Rev. John Hart (who subsequently married his niece) was graduated from Yale in 1703, nominally the second, but really the first actual student to graduate. He was the first B. A. of Yale.

After leaving the college Mr. Hooker settled at Wethersfield as a physician, and continued to practice there until his death. He studied law and was admitted to the bar but there is no evidence that he ever practiced law, and the supposition is that he studied it only that he might be useful to his patients in making wills and otherwise. Dr. Hooker was surgeon of the expedition against Canada in 1711. He died at Wethersfield, Conn., 1742.

269 Abigail Hart (Abigail,[4] John,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), daughter of Nathaniel and Abigail (Hooker) Hart of Kensington, Conn., b. July 21, 1723, at Kensington; m. Dr. James Hurlburt.

Note—Abigail (Hart) Hurlburt, is supposed to have died in Nov. 1789. Dr. Hurlburt died April 11, 1794, at Wethersfield, Conn. Dr. James Hurlburt married No. 2, Mrs. Ann (Hollister) Booth of Glastenbury.

W. S. Porter says that Dr. Hurlburt was then an eminent physician, but he subsequently fell into bad habits, his home was broken up and his wife returned to her parents. The Hart genealogy also makes a somewhat similar statement. The Hart genealogy gives the names of three children, and suggests there may have been others not found on the record. Porter gives the names of seven children, all different from those of the Hart book. Porter also gives the marriage of Mehitable Hooker to Dr. James Hurlburt and gives one child of name similar to one of those given in the Hart book. There seems to be considerable confusion in the record, perhaps some error, possibly two marriages, the Hart marriage a second one.

I therefore omit the names of children until further developments.

292 Joseph Hooker (Joseph,[4] John,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), son of Joseph and Sarah (Lewis) Hooker, of Farmington, Conn., b. March 30, 1751, at Farmington; m. 1771, Mary Ingersoll, daughter of Rev. Jonathan and Dorcas (Moss) Ingersoll, b. Dec. 20, 1748. They lived at Farmington until after the close of the Revolutionary War, and then removed to Litchfield, N. Y. Previous to his marriage Joseph Hooker had been an active worker in the affairs of the town, was a Lieutenant in the Militia. The Ingersoll family were strong loyalists, though never of a tricky, untrustworthy kind. Through the influence of his wife Joseph Hooker remained quietly neutral throughout the war, though it is probable that his sympathies were entirely with the American Patriots. After the close of the war he found that the confidence of the town was entirely withheld from him and that in active and honorable public duties he was not recognized, while honors and important trusts were heaped upon his brother and cousins who had taken an active part in the war. Sensitive under this very natural want of confidence he removed to New York, where, under new conditions he built a reputation for strict and unswerving integrity, and strong loyalty to the new born nation. He secured the confidence and esteem of the people among whom he had settled, and became active and honorably trusted in public affairs. He died at Litchfield, N. Y. June, 1799. She died at Litchfield, N. Y. 1805.

303 Thomas Hart Hooker (Roger,[4] John,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), son of Roger and Mercy (Hart) Hooker, of Farmington, Conn., b. Sept. 3, 1745, at Farmington; m. Feb. 1, 1769, Sarah Whitman, daughter of Deacon John and Abigail (Pantry) Whitman, of West Hartford, Conn., b. Feb. 27, 1747, baptized Mar. 1, 1747, at West Hartford. Sarah Whitman was a grand-daughter of Rev. Samuel Whitman, who succeeded Rev. Samuel Hooker as minister at Farmington. Rev. Samuel Whitman's mother, Anna Alcock, was a grand-daughter of Rev. Thomas Hooker's sister.

Mr. Hooker enlisted as a private soldier in the army at the first call in 1775, and before going to the seat of war he gave freedom to his negro servants, saying that he would not own property in a human being while he, himself, was fighting for freedom. He died in the army Nov. 26, 1775, and was buried among the other soldier dead at Roxbury, but the grave not being marked, his place of burial could not be identified when search was made for it at a later day, his body therefore remains with those of his compatriots who gave their lives for freedom's cause at the siege of Boston, and today the ashes of those patriot dead rests peacefully beneath the wild turmoil of Boston's streets. After some years his widow married, Apr. 8, 1779, Capt. Seth Collins, son of Robert Collins, of West Hartford, Conn., b. Nov. 27, 1742, at West Hartford. (She was Capt. Collins second wife). She d. at West Hartford, Conn., June 5, 1837.

306 Roger (Major) Hooker (Roger,[4] John,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), son of Roger and Anna (Kellogg) Hooker, of Farmington, Conn., born June 19, 1751, at Farmington; married Apr. 17, 1782, Mary Treadwell, daughter of Gov. John Treadwell, of Farmington, Conn., born at Farmington. They had no children. He died at Farmington, Conn., age, 79, Dec. 27, 1830. She died at Farmington, Conn. Aug. 15, 1826.

He made eleven voyages to the West Indies before the Revolutionary War. At the first call for troops upon the Lexington alarm, he joined the company of one hundred and eleven men raised by his cousin Capt. Noadiah Hooker, the first men from Farmington for the war, and the first from Connecticut to reach the army collecting before Boston. He was made a sergeant of that company when formed, but was soon afterward appointed an ensign, and when Washington took command of the army Roger Hooker was commissioned a second lieutenant of the Regular Continental Line, and he eventually became a major of the Line.

In 1776, he fitted out the fire ships at New York, with which Gen. Washington endeavored to destroy the British ships. As a brigade major he had charge of the correspondence of the generals upon whose staff he served.

He was sent with the flag of truce to communicate to the British general commanding New York, information of the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne, and throughout the war was held in high esteem by Gen. Washington, and was frequently entrusted with responsible and important duties. After the war he was for a number of years Sheriff of the County and was an active Justice of the Peace until he was 70 years old.

Previous to his death, having no children and his wife being dead he disposed of his estate to his brother-in-law, retaining possession during his life. He was a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, and he is the Roger Hooker referred to in the account of the "Hooker House" and the "Hooker Elm."

He graduated from Yale College, 1775, and was commissioned a Captain in the Army of the Revolution. He served until the close of the war, and with his brother-in-law, Major Roger Hooker, became a member of the Society of the Cincinnati. He died at Sodus Bay, N. Y., 1813. She died at Wolcott, N. Y., 1817.

Although there is no record of service in the Revolutionary War, yet his name appears upon the pension list, under the Act of 1832, and this is evidence that he was either in the pay of commissary department of the regular Connecticut Army. After the war he was a gentleman farmer and active in the affairs of the town. He died at Farmington, Conn., June 5, 1857. She died at Farmington, Conn., Apr. 5, 1817.

He graduated from Yale college, 1768, studied for the ministry and was settled at Farmington, Conn., in 1787. His preaching is said to have been somewhat "quaint and erratic," and after four years at Farmington, he was dismissed and was never settled at any other place.

After his dismissal he returned to his native place, East Hartford, and then settled upon a farm at South Manchester, Conn., and from the stories that are told of his farming methods we may infer that he was unique in his farming methods as in his preaching. Gov. Treadwell is said to have made this comment on Mr. Olcott's preaching: "He wan't much on the Doctrines, but he kinder got to the pint on't every time." He died at South Manchester, Conn., Apr. 19, 1811. She married No. 2, Capt. Samuel Alvord. He died at East Hartford, Conn. She died at East Hartford, Conn., June, 1827.

320 William Hooker Smith (Mehitable,[4] James,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), son of Rev. John and Mehitable (Hooker) Smith, of White Plains, N. Y., born Mar. 23, 1725, at White Plains; married Sarah Brown, daughter of Jonathan Brown, of Rye, N. Y., born Mar. 13, 1725. Mr. Smith studied medicine with his father, who was a practicing physician as well as a preacher. Dr. Smith served as a surgeon in the Revolutionary Army. They removed to Wyoming Valley where he became a noted physician and where he died. Miner's History of Wyoming, has a lengthy notice of him, but does not give any account of his family.

The history of Westchester County, N. Y., also gives notes upon the Smiths and also upon the Brownes, which was a particularly noted family of Beachworth, Kent County, England, founded by Sir Anthony Browne, who was created Knight of the Bath at the Coronation of Richard, II., but none of these books give any reliable account of Dr. Smith's family. Dr. Smith has, himself, left a meagre account of his family in his old family Bible—published at Oxford, England, 1772,—which he credits to a record in his father's bible. In this account he commences with his great-grand-father, but apparently this ancestor was his great-great-grand-father. His name was William Smith, he served as a soldier in the army of Oliver Cromwell, and after the troubles were over, probably meaning the Restoration, he married Elizabeth Hartley, of Newport-Paquell, Buckinghamshire, and settled there and had a family of six children. Dr. Smith says that his grand-father married Susannah Odell, daughter of a gentleman residing within four miles of Newport-Paquell (old England), and resided there for a time, but removed to New York when his son, John, father of Dr. W. H. Smith, was 13 years old.

Dr. Smith records the death of his wife, Sarah (Browne) Smith: "My wife, Sarah, died on Friday, the 12th of June, 1778, about nine o'clock at night, was buried the 14th, following, on my own land at Jacob's Plains," etc.

Dr. William Hooker Smith subsequently married again Nov. 22, 1779, Widow Margery Smith, at Susquehannah, and by this marriage had one child. He died July 17, 1815.

He was a merchant of Hartford and Windsor, having with his brothers succeeded to his father's business at Hartford, and established the business at Windsor. For an account of these business connections, see Stiles New History of Windsor.

The Windsor firm became Hooker and Chaffee, consisting of James Hooker, silent partner, Horace Hooker, brother of James, and John Chaffee, a brother of James Hooker's third wife. Before the Revolutionary War this was one of the largest and most flourishing mercantile houses of New England, and transacted much business for the Colonial Government. James Hooker was commissioned a Captain, and all the firm were devoted patriots and gave freely of their means for the assistance of the Colonial cause and at the end of the war were seriously embarrassed. Subsequently their heavy losses by the French and Spanish spoliations caused their failure and the dissolution of the famous firm, and scattering of its members. He was descended from Elizabeth Standley, daughter of John Standley, of Farmington, Conn., and sister of Abigail Standley, who married John Hooker, therefore a degree of relationship existed through the Standley blood, between this branch of the Wadsworth family and descendents from John Hooker, Esq., of Farmington, and the cousinship also existed through Hooker blood between these Hooker descendents, and Mehitable Russell, wife of Col. Samuel Andrews, the founder of Episcopacy, or as it was then called, Church of England, the name Episcopal not coming into use until after the Revolutionary War. Mr. Pierpont was the first Episcopalian to receive the appointment of the Justice of the Peace from the Connecticut Legislature. Mr. Pierpont was one of the earliest builders of a grist mill in that vicinity, in business he was a farmer and a general trader. A curious experience fell to Mr. Pierpont in his church activity. For a number of years he was an officer of the Congregational Church at North Haven, he then resigned his position and membership to join the Church of England, in which he was elected parish clerk, the church however refused to accept his resignation and elected him clerk and for four years he served in the official position in both churches. He was for many years Representative in the State Assembly. He died at North Haven, Conn., Feb. 8, 1824.

372 Giles Pierpont (Joseph Pierpont,[4] Mary,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), son of Joseph and Hannah (Russell) Pierpont, of North Haven, Conn., born June 4, 1741, at North Haven, Conn.

Giles Pierpont was accounted to be the wealthiest man in North Haven, he was one of the nine persons possessing a silver watch, he paid taxes on six "Smokes," i.e. chimneys, but whether they were all on his own house or not, is not stated, but if they were, his residence might be styled palatial with its six chimneys.

The custom of building additions to the original house for the accommodation of children's families may furnish a solution to the query, but the probability is that he owned more than one house. He died 1832.

378 Esther Edwards (Sarah Pierpont,[4] Mary,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), daughter of Rev. Jonathan and Sarah (Pierpont) Edwards, of Northampton, Mass., born Feb. 13, 1732, at Northampton; married Jan. 29, 1752, Rev. Aaron Burr, of Fairfield, Conn., born Jan. 4, 1715. He graduated from Yale college, 1735, was pastor of the church in Newark, N. J., and chosen President of "Nassau Hall" then located in Newark, Oct. 1738, when he died. Rev. Jonathan Edwards was chosen his successor.

Dr. Green said "No clergyman in the state of New Jersey was probably ever more beloved and respected and influential than President Burr." Knapp says in his notice of his wife, "President Burr was a scholar of high acquirements, admired for his eloquence, his readiness in business, his deep and fervid piety, as well as for his knowledge of the great doctrines of religion. He was a pattern of meekness and of evangelical piety. He was a friend of Whitfield, accompanied him to Boston and preached when Whitfield was exhausted."

"Mrs. Burr was beautiful, accomplished, pious and learned. She was eloquent and fascinating, and wrote with genius and facility."

Note. This query suggests itself, Aaron Burr, had behind him these parents, Rev. Jonathan Edwards, Rev. James Pierpont, Rev. Samuel Hooker, Rev. Thomas Hooker, and perhaps other Reverends. How then shall we account for the very bad reputation which historians give to Aaron Burr? Has he been misrepresented in history, or is history true and he was simply a personification of this concentration of ultra religious ancestry?

Mrs. Burr and her father were inoculated at the same time for small-pox of which President Edwards died, and Mrs. Burr, having partially recovered, had a relapse and soon followed him. He died at Princeton, N. J., Sept. 24, 1757. She died at Princeton, N. J., Apr. 7, 1758.

397 Riverius Hooker (Daniel,[4] Daniel,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), son of Dr. Daniel & Sarah (Webster) Hooker of West Hartford, Conn., b. Jan. 1749; baptized Jan. 22, 1749; m. ——. Soon afterwards he disappeared, leaving an infant daughter of whom nothing further can be found. About the time of Riverius Hooker's disappearance from Conn., a Riverius Hooker appeared in Maine, saying that he came from Connecticut, engaged in the lumber business.

Nathaniel Hooker of Hartford, a cousin of Riverius Hooker's father, was a merchant and vessel owner and engaged in Maine lumber trade, and it seems very natural that the young Riverius should have gone to Maine in the employ of the Hartford merchant. The West Hartford Riverius and the Maine Riverius were apparently the same. The name Riverius is an unusual one and except in this instance (and his descendants in the Maine family) is not known in the Hooker family. He married 1775, at Pownelboro (now Wincasset) Me., Mehitable Baker, of Litchfield, Me., b. Feb. 14, 1755. After a time saying that he was called to Connecticut on business, he again disappears and nothing further was heard from him, though it has lately come to light that at about the time that Riverius Hooker is supposed to have sailed from Maine for Connecticut, a Riverius Hooker appeared in a New Hampshire regiment for service in the Revolutionary War. She died 1804.

410 Martin Hooker (Andrew,[5] Samuel,[4] Samuel,[3] Samuel,[2] Thomas[1]), son of Andrew and Mary (Lee) Hooker of Berlin, Conn., b. 1738, at Berlin, Conn. Enlisted in the French and Indian War. The story is told that at one sentry post near where his company was on picket the sentry had been killed almost every night by Indian sharp-shooters and every plan to capture the Indian assassin had failed. The men were in fear of the post which meant certain death to every sentry posted there and the officers hesitated to order men to duty there and called for volunteers to take the duty. At first none responded, then Martin Hooker stepped forward and went upon the post, a little while afterward a shot rang out upon the still night air, and hastening to the place his comrades found that another sentry had met death. Martin Hooker was killed June 10, 1757. The sequel to Martin Hooker's death used, many years ago, to be told in this story, then preserved by tradition, I do not know that it is preserved in any historical work. Martin Hooker was a favorite in his company and his death was mourned by officers and men. One stalwart young man a particular friend of young Hooker asked to be placed upon the post, saying that he wished to avenge Hooker's death, and he asked to be allowed to use his own discretion and fire upon any intruder without waiting to challenge. This was accorded him and preparing himself carefully he went upon the post His comrades had hardly returned to their camp quarters when a shot rang clear and loud upon the dangerous post and they hurried back expecting to find another sentry killed, but the sentry was pacing his post quietly and apparently unconcernedly, upon the officer's asking who had fired he replied that he had fired the shot and pointed to a clump of bushes near which a hog lay dead, and explained that soon after coming upon the post he observed a hog rooting among the bushes, and he at once fired at it, immediately the hog leaped into the air and fell where they saw it. Examing the dead hog they pulled off the skin and found a dead Indian within it. Martin Hooker was avenged and he was the last sentry killed upon that post.

By her first marriage Mrs. Fuller had two children, the eldest Rhoda Ann Fuller a pert little Miss of 9 years when her mother married Esquire Hooker, was very much opposed to her mother's marriage, and declaring that she would not be present at the marriage nor go with her mother to her new home, she left her mother, and took up her abode with her grand parents, who were not quite as well supplied with the luxuries of life as was Esquire Hooker. By advice of Mr. Hooker neither he nor his wife took any notice of the young miss, nor made any effort to induce her to come to them, and for a year neither of them saw her, no doubt very much to her surprise and disappointment, of course the Hookers and Lees being on good terms, often talked the matter over, and made their arrangements together. When a year had passed, Esquire Hooker drove in his carriage to the Lees' nominally upon business. After talking upon business matters, Mr. Hooker turned to the little girl and said "Miss Rhoda wouldn't you like to see your mother?" The little girl's eyes moistened and with quivering lips she replied "yes". "Well" said the Squire, "put on your things and get into the carriage and I will take you around to see your mother and when you get ready to come back I will bring you home." So the little miss went to her mother, and soon found that everything was so nice and comfortable, that she did not wish to return to the home of her grandparents, but remained there until her own marriage in 1815, to Samuel A. Mitchell, the cartographer, and took up her residence at Philadelphia, Penn. Mr. Hooker was extensively engaged in woolen goods manufacture. He died at Bristol, Conn., June 22, 1826. May 24, 1812, Elisabeth Daggett, daughter of Henry, Esq., and Elisabeth (Prescott) Daggett, of New Haven, Conn., b. July 5, 1786, at New Haven, Conn.

Mr. Hooker graduated from Yale College, 1805, went to Columbia, S. C., and studied law with his brother John, who was established there a practising lawyer. While in South Carolina, Mr. Hooker taught a school at Cambridge, S. C. (Old Ninety Six), for a short time, then accepted a position as tutor in South Carolina College, Columbia, S. C., continuing the study of law with his brother. In 1808, he was appointed tutor in Yale College, which appointment he accepted, and returned to Connecticut, to enter upon the duty. He was made Clerk of the Faculty, and filled the position during the time he was attached to the college. While connected with Yale College, he made the acquaintance of Miss Daggett, a niece of Hon. Roger Sherman (Signer of the Declaration of Independence), and preparatory to marrying her he resigned his position at the college, returned to his native place, Farmington, assumed the charge of his father's farm and business, and the care of his father in his declining years, built a home for his wife and settled down to farming and public duties. After the death of his mother he brought his father to his own house, and fitted up the old home for a collegiate school. His school became quite noted, for a number of men who became noted in public affairs were fitted for college in the "Old Red College," as the old house was called. This was the first movement in educational matters at Farmington, and the old house in which the first school was opened, had been the home of a descendant from Ezekiel Cheever, the famous Colonial teacher, founder of the Boston Latin School, and author of the first school books published in America.

After carrying on this private school for a few years, a movement was taken to form a company to found an Academy at Farmington. Mr. Hooker became interested in the Academy scheme, proposed to close his own school in favor of the Academy, and wished to have Mr. Simeon Hart made the principal of the Academy. This Academy, under Mr. Hart, became a famous school. The Academy was finally relinquished, and Mr. Hart opened a private school very much as Mr. Hooker had previously done, and many famous men were fitted for college, and started upon their public career in these schools of Mr. Simeon Hart and his successor and nephew, Mr. Edward L. Hart.

"The Old Red College" having ended its service as the home of a collegiate school, did duty for a time as a tenement, but it was finally demolished to make room for the first school house of Miss Sarah Porter, and from this small building, upon the site of the "Old Red College," came the widely known Female School of Miss Porter, and the Memorial Building, erected a few years ago by Miss Porter's scholars stands a little northward and westward from the site of the "Old Red College," the home of a descendant from Ezekiel Cheever, and the place of the first great education movement at Farmington, Conn.

After closing his school, Mr. Hooker settled down to literary work, active participation in the public affairs of the town and scientific farming. He died at Farmington, Conn., May 5, 1846. She died at Hartford, Conn., Aug. 2, 1869.

April 26, 1814, at Rochester, N. Y.; m. 1849, Maria Cowenhoven, of Brooklyn, N. Y. James Hooker Strong entered the Naval service of the United States as a midshipman in 1829, and by regular course of promotion he became a commander in 1861, and as such took an active part in the Civil War (1861-1865).

At the battle of Mobile Bay he commanded the Steam Sloop of War "Monongahela" and after passing the forts while the fleet was steaming up the bay, seeing the Rebel Ram "Tennessee" approaching to attach the Flagship "Hartford," Commander Strong turned his wooden ship out of the line and going at full speed, ran into the Iron Clad Ram, striking her fairly and giving her a tremendous blow, which, however, also crushed the "Monongahela's" head and stern. As his ship swung around after striking the Ram, he gave the iron clad a broadside of eleven inch solid shot from his guns, with however but little effect. The other ships following his example also attacked the ram in similar manner, while the guns of the ram were doing great execution among the fleet. Having gained a sufficient distance for effective work, Commander Strong again turned his ship toward the enemy and skillfully working his way among the surrounding ships he again ran into the Ram under a full head of steam. He had again turned his ship and was about to run into the iron clad a third time, when her flag was hauled down and she surrendered to the fleet, disabled and almost destroyed by the tremendous assaults she had received from the combined attack upon her. He was Rear Admiral on his retirement from the Navy. He died Nov. 28, 1882.
